DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

Claim 1 is rejected as failing to define the invention in the manner required by 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph.

The claim(s) are narrative in form and replete with indefinite and functional or operational language. The structure which goes to make up the device must be clearly and positively specified. The structure must be organized and correlated in such a manner as to present a complete operative device. The claim(s) must be in one sentence form only. Note the format of the claims in the patent(s) cited.

Further, it is not clear, from both the claim and the disclosure, whether "non-porous polyethylene plastic foam pad, non-latex rubber material" is defined as two separate laminated structures (laminated polyethylene plastic foam or laminated rubber) or a one-piece laminate having both foam and rubber.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

- 2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:
 - (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.
- 3. Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Lim et al. (6,187,696) in view of Dolnick (3,935,890).

'696 discloses a protective cover as claimed but for using non-porous polyethylene plastic foam and non-latex rubber material for forming the laminate.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to form the laminate of '696 with non-porous polyethylene plastic foam and non-latex rubber material, since it has been held to be within the general skill of a worker in the art to select a known material on the basis of its suitability for the intended use as a matter of obvious design choice. In re Leshin, 125 USPQ 416.

Further, '696 does not show an adhesive surface for attachment to an equipment. '890 teaches a protective cover having an adhesive surface for attaching to a surface. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the protective cover of '696 with an adhesive surface so that the protective cover can be easily be attached to any surface as desired.

Conclusion

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Any inquiry concerning this communication or earlier communications from the examiner should be directed to Chuck Mah whose telephone number is (703) 308-0676. The examiner can normally be reached on 5/4-9.

I claim:

1. The invention relates to a protective covering that will provide a sanitary cover to aid in the prevention of the spread of viruses and bacteria among persons sharing medical, physical therapy and physical equipment, devices and accessories, allowing everyday usage of medical, physical therapy and physical exercise equipment by multiple users. The I C WRAP is composed of a 1/16 inch thick Polyethylene foam pad, backed with clear HDPE adhesive film. Producing a non-slip, equipment-contacting side, and a sanitary surface on the patient contact surface. The protective covers for use with or without being provided in a roll of covers that have perforations at predetermined spaced intervals that allow the user to tear off one or more sections to achieve a cover of a desired size or in flat sheets.
